RTD routinely reviews its fare structure, policies and programs to ensure current and future customers have access to high-quality, affordable public transportation. Prior to the launch of the Systemwide Fare Study and Equity Analysis in 2022, RTD received feedback from customers and community members that fares were too expensive and the structure was difficult to understand. In addition, RTD had experienced a decline in ridership since 2014, a trend that was worsened by the COVID-19 pandemic.

In response, RTD launched the Systemwide Fare Study and Equity Analysis, a holistic and customer-centric assessment of the current fares. The fare study process was intended to create a fare structure as well as fare policies and programs that achieved three goals: equity, affordability and simplicity.
To develop a new fare structure, policies and programs that were more equitable, affordable and simple, RTD considered multiple factors, including:

CUSTOMER & COMMUNITY FEEDBACK
RTD met with and gathered feedback from thousands of members of the community to understand perceptions of current fares and future fare structure preferences.

FARE PRICING OF OTHER AGENCIES
RTD reviewed the fare pricing and pass programs of other transit agencies with similar operating characteristics to explore best practices and identify opportunities to better meet customer and agency needs.

LONG-TERM FINANCIAL SUSTAINABILITY
RTD predicted fare revenue, sales tax revenue forecasts and cost factors to design a fare structure, policies and programs that would support the agency’s long-term financial sustainability.

OPERATIONAL, CAPITAL & TECHNOLOGICAL FACTORS
RTD assessed future ridership demand, as well as the potential need for additional vehicles and fare collection equipment and systems. RTD also evaluated expanded retail networks and cash reload opportunities.

FARE EQUITY, INCLUDING THE IMPACT ON MINORITY & LOW-INCOME CUSTOMERS
Fare equity was central to the fare study in line with:
- RTD’s mission as a public transit agency
- Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
- 1995 Executive Order on environmental justice
- Additional guidelines outlined by the Federal Transit Administration
- No disparate impact on minority populations or disproportionate burden on low-income populations was found in the fare equity analysis.
From spring 2022 to spring 2023, RTD engaged with customers, community members and other stakeholders through focus groups, surveys, feedback panels, customer and community meetings, community events, public hearings and open houses. The feedback collected in each stage informed the design of the proposed fare changes.

SPRING 2022
In April 2022, RTD met with customers and stakeholders to outline the study’s purpose. RTD gathered feedback on the current fare structure and the community’s vision of equity, affordability and simplicity.

SUMMER 2022
RTD used customer and community feedback to develop conceptual fare structure options and presented a set of ideas on how to lower fares and simplify the fare structure.

FALL 2022
RTD developed two fare structure alternatives, as well as updated policies and programs. Community members were introduced to the options and voiced their preferences for one of the two alternatives. They also could prioritize features they liked in the design of each structure and provide feedback on the Discount fare structure and other policies and programs.

SUMMER 2023
The RTD Board of Directors approved the recommended fare structure, policies and programs in July 2023.

SPRING 2023
A final recommended fare structure, policies and programs were developed based on community feedback and additional financial, operational and fare equity considerations. Customers and community members were introduced to the final recommendation and had the opportunity to provide public comment.

2023-2024
Implementation of the new fare structure, policies and programs begins in September 2023 with the launch of the Zero Fare for Youth pilot program. All additional fare changes will go into effect in 2024.
RTD used multiple engagement methods to ensure customers and community members were aware of fare changes and had the opportunity to express their ideas and preferences in the design of the new fare structure, policies and programs. RTD used an approach centered on customers and equity by:

- Engaging historically underrepresented populations through partnerships with community-based organizations, including Athletics and Beyond, CREA Results, Cultivando, Denver Streets Partnership, Focus ReEntry and Una Mano Una Esperanza
- Performing all engagement activities in both English and Spanish
- Hosting feedback panels with representatives of diverse communities
- Translating fare study materials into more than 20 different languages spoken by customers within the service area

Key Engagement Metrics

- Public Event Participants: 437
- Feedback Panel Participants: 180
- Community Conversations: 2,400+
- Earned Media Reach (English & Spanish): 140 million+
- Email Subscribers: 25,000+
- Public Comments & Survey Responses: 7,119
- Focus Group Participants: 185
- Website & Social Media Viewers: 35,000+
FARE CHANGES
Driven by the goals of equity, affordability and simplicity, the Fare Study and Equity Analysis resulted in the following changes to the fare structure, policies and programs.

NEW FARE STRUCTURE
The new fare structure lowered fares for all customers and community members. Fares were simplified by combining the Local and Regional fares into one Standard fare.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR CUSTOMERS
Under the new fare structure, customers pay an Airport fare for SkyRide and A Line trips that begin or end at Denver International Airport. All other destinations in the RTD service area will use the Standard fare, which combines all services categorized as Local and Regional under the previous structure. RTD customers can also purchase a Monthly Pass for $88, which allows for travel anywhere in the system, including to and from the airport.
DISCOUNT FARE STRUCTURE

The fare study streamlined Discount fares for customers ages 65 and older, individuals with disabilities, Medicare recipients and customers who enroll in the LiVE Income-Based Fare Discount Program.
